South Carolina
State Historic Preservation Office
State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO)

The State Historic Preservation Office encourages and facilitates the responsible stewardship of South Carolina's irreplaceable historic and prehistoric places. The SHPO was established in 1969 to implement the goals of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, which extended federal support to state and local preservation efforts. The Office, which receives federal funds through the National Park Service, is a program of the South Carolina Department of Archives and History. Elizabeth M. Johnson, Director of Historical Services, is the Deputy State Historic Preservation Officer. On this website, you will find information about the programs and services offered by the SHPO and links to other preservation-related sites.

Roadside architecture and branding go hand in hand. Companies began building stores across the nation with designs that would be immediately recognizable to its patrons no matter what city they were traveling through. This is a service station constructed in Newberry sometime in the late 1930s-early 1940s. Can you tell from the design which oil company it belonged to?
Why Preserve?

Other sections of this website focus on the various programs of the State Historic Preservation Office, as well as information about historic properties in the state. This section helps answer the question of why we engage in these efforts, what we gain when we do, and how to inspire others to join in.

The Value of Historic Preservation is a powerpoint slide show that you may download and use for presentations. It includes slides and a script. It is very large - 32MB - and may take some time to download.

The National Register of Historic Places - Search Records by County

South Carolina has more than 1,300 listings in the National Register of Historic Places, including more than 160 historic districts. You can also search records for National Register properties by location, individual, or topic through the Archives and History On-Line Records Index.

Use the map below to navigate to a specific county list of National Register properties in that county with links to:

- a summary paragraph describing the importance of each National Register property
- photographs of each individually listed property and representative photographs for historic districts
- the complete text of the National Register nomination forms

Follow this link for a list of properties in the state that have been removed from the Register.

Thanks to the South Carolina State Library and the South Carolina Department of Archives and History On-Line Records Index for making possible the scanning of National Register forms and photographs.

The following properties in Cherokee County have been listed on the National Register of Historic Places:

- Archaeological Site 38CK1
- Archaeological Site 38CK44
- Archaeological Site 38CK52
- Carnegie Free Library
- Coopersville Ironworks Site and Susan Furnace Site
- Cowpens Furnace Site
- Cowpens National Battlefield
- Ellen Furnace Site
- Gaffney Commercial Historic District
- Gaffney Residential Historic District
- Zero Hicks House

Welcome to South Carolina Historical Markers Online

Take a virtual tour of the hundreds of roadside historical markers in the state. Find a marker in your neighborhood. Curious about a marker you passed on the highway? Search by keyword, county, or description.

Visit us often for latest updates of new markers being installed across the state. If you are a teacher, student, or parent then you may find valuable resources under the Resources section of our site. Enjoy!
Grants and Tax Incentives for Preserving Historic Buildings and Sites

Several financial incentives are available to owners who preserve historic buildings and sites in South Carolina.

Historic Preservation Grants are federal funds from the US Department of the Interior's National Park Service and are administered by the South Carolina Department of Archives and History. There are two categories of projects: Survey and Planning Projects, and Stabilization Projects. The differences between the two categories regarding eligible activities and eligible applicants are explained in State Historic Preservation Office Grants at the left. These matching grant programs provide financial support for preservation projects.

Other institutions and organizations have financial incentive programs that support a variety of preservation-related activities see Other Financial Incentives on the left.

Federal, state, and local tax incentives encourage the rehabilitation of historic buildings and donation of conservation easements. The State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) helps owners meet the standards required for these programs. Both owner-occupied homes and buildings used to produce income---stores, offices, apartment buildings, for example---may be eligible for tax incentives. Use the links below to begin identifying tax incentives that may apply to your building.
Other Financial Incentives

Please note: the following descriptions are very brief and do not include all grant restrictions and requirements.

American Battlefield Protection Program (ABPP) Grants: Federal, state, local, and tribal governments, nonprofit organizations, and educational institutions are eligible for these grants. The grants are for projects that lead to the protection of battlefield land and sites associated with battlefields. Types of eligible projects range from historical research to archaeological surveys to preservation plans to public education. The grants do not fund land acquisition or capital improvement projects. Grant awards are made once each year. The average grant is around $25,000. The ABPP is a program of the National Park Service. For more information, visit the ABPP website at http://www2.cr.nps.gov/abpp/.

Preserve America Grants: Eligible applicants for these federal grants include designated Preserve America communities and neighborhoods, Certified Local Governments (CLGs) in the process of applying for Preserve America designation, State Historic Preservation Offices, and Tribal Historic Preservation Offices. The grants, which are administered by the National Park Service, support preservation efforts through heritage tourism, education, and historic preservation planning. Each grant requires a dollar-for-dollar match. The minimum grant request is $20,000; the maximum grant request is $150,000. More information about Preserve America communities and the Preserve America grants program is available at http://www.preserveamerica.gov/.

Preservation Services Fund Grants: Administered by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, these grants are awarded to nonprofit organizations and public agencies for preservation planning and education efforts. The matching grants range from $500 to $5,000 (typically from $1,000 to $1,500). Funds may be used to obtain professional expertise in areas such as architecture, archaeology, engineering, preservation planning, land-use planning, fund raising, and other

Guides to Financial Incentives

The State Historic Preservation Office has created a Financial Incentives Guide for South Carolina’s Historic Resources, which includes sources of financial assistance for historic preservation projects. The guide is available online or you can contact Deborah Jackson to request a paper copy.

The Advisory Council on Historic Preservation has created a new online guide to financial incentives for historic preservation projects. Sources of Financial Assistance for Historic Preservation Projects emphasizes federal funding, but also touches upon state, tribal, local, and nonprofit funding opportunities.

The South Carolina State Library has developed a list of Grant and Funding Sources on the Web, a general guide to a variety of grants and other

Stimulus Funding

On March 26, 2009 the federal government’s Office of Management and Budget issued guidance that recognizes compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) is required for Recovery Act projects. This means that federal agencies must consider the potential impact of Recovery Act projects, like all federal funding, on historic properties. Consultation with the State Historic Preservation Office is part of the federal agency process. If you will be submitting a Recovery Act project for SHPO review, please read and follow the instructions for the Project Review Form and fill it out completely to ensure a timely turn around. If you have questions, please do not hesitate to contact us. Please be advised: with the influx of American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) projects we are taking our full 30 days to review. Please plan accordingly so that you can meet your deadlines. There will be no exceptions or rush reviews.

Governor Mark Sanford has appointed Comptroller General Richard Eckstrom as chairman of the South Carolina Stimulus Oversight, Accountability and Coordination Task Force. For more information see this website: http://www.stimulus.sc.gov, which includes links to information about how specific funds are being allocated in South Carolina.

National preservation organizations have also created websites about the economic stimulus funding.

An Introduction to Archaeology in South Carolina

What is Archaeology? Here is a definition: "[It] is the scientific study of the physical evidence of past human societies recovered through collection, artifact analysis, and excavation. Archaeologists not only attempt to discover and describe past cultures but also to formulate explanations for the development of cultures. Conclusions drawn from study and analyses provide answers and predictions about human behavior that add, complement, and sometimes correct the written accounts of history and prehistory (ref. http://www.cr.nps.gov/seac/terms.htm).

Information and guidance about archaeology is available through many different agencies and organizations. On these pages, you will find information about archaeology in the state of South Carolina as well as links to a variety of other sources.
