Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance of the property. Explain contributing and noncontributing resources if necessary. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, setting, size, and significant features.)

Summary Paragraph

The F. W. Welborn House, at 405 Weston Street in Fountain Inn, Greenville County, South Carolina, built ca.1914, is a one-story, frame, Craftsman style bungalow with an asphalt shingle-sheathed pyramidal roof that features an architecturally distinctive eyebrow curve in the center of the front eave of the façade, and a recessed front porch at the house's southwest corner. The house's basic materials are wood and brick. It is located near the corner of Weston Street and Quillen Avenue, one block east of Main Street. The house fronts on Weston Street, is shaded by large oak trees, and is surrounded by natural areas with small shrubbery. It rests on a brick foundation laid in a running bond pattern that is currently painted red, and the exterior walls are covered with weatherboard siding that terminate in wood corner boards. Rising from the center of the house is an internal brick chimney that protrudes from the peak of the pyramidal roof. The house's exterior and interior have various architectural details characteristic of the Craftsman style that include exposed rafters under wide overhanging eaves, a large central tripartite window with leaded-glass traceried transoms overlooking the front lawn, and a deep corner porch at the house's southeast corner that historically joined a porch at the façade's opposite corner across a porch walk in front of the large tripartite window. The engaged front porch's roof is supported by large square posts with fluting above the knee wall balustrade and deep necking at the top suggestive of a classical fluted column. On either side elevation, near the front porch, are shallow one-bay wide projections (bay windows) with hip roofs and paired windows. An original photograph of the house, taken ca. 1919, shows the house sited on a large open lot void of any landscaping elements on Weston Street, dirt at that time, before being moved approximately 75 feet in 1925 to the adjoining lot to the west of the lot on which the house was built. The interior of the house boasts a plethora of details that are indicative of the Craftsman style that include exposed oak woodwork mantels, an eighteen foot window seat with recessed panels and a large interior storage area under the tripartite window in the living room, exposed oak window and door surrounds with bull's eye corner blocks, picture and crown molding, and flooring. Original stained, five foot, raised paneled oak pocket doors open from the spacious living room to the dining room. The dining room has a nine-foot window seat with a large storage area under a pair of one-over-one double-hung wood windows. The remaining portion of the first floor retains a large portion of the original beaded board ceilings, original raised-paneled doors, door and window surrounds, flooring, and mantels.

A partially-paved driveway at the house's north elevation leads to a non-contributing two-car garage that was built by the current property owners after 2005. The garage does include compatible exterior elements that reference the Craftsman style detailing found on the house. Located at the property's southwest corner is a small non-contributing front-gabled storage building that the current owners added to the property ca. 2006.

Although this building is modern, it bears the same color palette found on the house and the garage. The house and property are in excellent condition and there have been minimal alterations.

Narrative Description

The F. W. Welborn House, ca. 1914

Contributing Building

The Welborn House is located at 405 Weston Street in a sidewalk-lined residential neighborhood near downtown Fountain Inn, Greenville County, South Carolina, near the intersection of Weston Street and Quillen Avenue, and adjoins a property to the west that is the site on which the Welborn House was originally built in ca. 1914 by F. W. Welborn. The house is sited on a one-acre lot, square in shape, bordered on the east by Weston Street, on the north by a brick house built ca. 1926 when the Welborn family moved their house approximately 75 feet to its current location in 1925, and on the south and west by contiguous buildings. The nominated property is located on the west side of Weston Street, facing east with the east elevation of the building nearest to the street. The property encompasses one acre and includes the F. W. Welborn House, built ca. 1914, and two non-contributing buildings: a two-car garage at the property's southwest corner, and a one-story storage building at the property's southeast corner. The two-car garage was built in 2006, and the one-story storage building was moved to the site ca. 2006.

Interior Description

The interior of the F. W. Welborn House has been minimally altered since its construction and retains its original pine and oak flooring, molding, trim, and detailing. The flooring in the northwest corner of the kitchen was replaced by the current owners in 2005 when they renovated the former porch at this corner as the kitchen. When the current owners purchased the house the kitchen was located at the northeast corner. The layout of the first floor is nearly identical to the plans of the original builder, with the exception of a staircase leading from the first floor behind the living room to a functional living space that was originally an attic. The current property owners purchased the elaborate pine staircase that leads from the first floor to the second floor from the estate auction of a local doctor in Simpsonville, South Carolina and installed it in 2005 when they renovated the original attic space with reinforced beams to support occupancy, OSB flooring, beaded board wainscoting, and tongue-and-groove pine boards. They exposed the interior chimney and its low-fired bricks during the renovation and built a shed-roofed dormer that extends from the second-story's west elevation. The 2005 renovations do not have any visual effect on the interior spaces which retain a high degree of integrity. The living spaces (living room, dining room, bedrooms) retain historic hardwood floors, beaded board ceilings, molded trim and door surrounds, fireplace mantels and paneled doors.

Garage, 2006

Noncontributing Building

This one-story frame, side-gabled, two-car garage is finished with weatherboards that match the weatherboard exterior of the F. W. Welborn House, and its roof is covered with asphalt shingles. The driveway at the property's northern boundary leads from Weston Street to this garage at the property's northwest corner. The current property owners built the garage in 2006. The building's vinyl siding and exposed rafters under wide eave overhangs match the color scheme and design of the F. W. Welborn House.

Shed, ca. 2006

Noncontributing Building

A one-story, front-gabled shed is finished with weatherboard siding, and the roof is covered with asphalt shingles. The shed is supported at each of its elevations by concrete blocks, and latticework extends from each of these corner concrete piers. A wooden front door and one-over-one vinyl window are located at the shed's east elevation. The current property owners purchased and had this building moved to their property's southwest boundary.

Integrity

The F. W. Welborn House is one of the earliest houses built in Fountain Inn, and it is in excellent condition. Its exterior and interior architectural elements are unmatched when compared to homes that were built during the first two decades of the twentieth century in Fountain Inn, South Carolina. The F. W. Welborn House is located at 405 North Weston Street near downtown Fountain Inn just south of the lot on which it was built ca. 1914. Historic photographs of the house, on the lot on which it was originally located, and the adjoining lot to which it was moved in 1925, show the house with few exterior alterations. Owners who have occupied the house since its construction and its relocation to an adjoining lot seventy-five feet to the south in 1925 have minimally altered the house's integrity with the exception of the addition of porch railing at the house's façade (west elevation), and an enclosed corner porch at the northeast elevation. The current property owners restored the original knee wall balustrade, but retained the corner porch enclosure, a historic alteration as evidenced in an early to mid-twentieth century photograph. The current property owners did add a staircase behind the living room at the house's east elevation, however, it is not visible upon entering the house's front entry and the staircase material is period-appropriate. These owners have been committed and dedicated to the preservation the building's interior and exterior architectural integrity.

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria

(Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for National Register listing.)

- A Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.
- B Property is associated with the lives of persons significant in our past.
- C Property embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or represents the work of a master, or possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction.
- D Property has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Property is:

- A Owned by a religious institution or used for religious purposes.
- B removed from its original location.
- C a birthplace or grave.
- D a cemetery.
- E a reconstructed building, object, or structure.
- F a commemorative property.
- G less than 50 years old or achieving significance within the past 50 years.

Criteria Considerations (explanation, if necessary)

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance and applicable criteria.)

The F.W. Welborn House, built ca. 1914, is one of Fountain Inn's earliest houses and is one of the most representative and exemplary residential examples of the Craftsman style in Fountain Inn, comparable only to the McDowell House on North Main Street. It meets National Register Criterion C for architecture. The house's defining exterior architectural feature is the distinctive eyebrow curve in the façade's front eave and roofline. The Welborn House is architecturally significant when compared to the other fourteen residential buildings built in the Craftsman style in Fountain Inn that were determined eligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places in the "Historic Resources Survey of Fountain Inn, South Carolina" from 1999. The F.W. Welborn House's period of significance is ca. 1914, the estimated date of the completion of the house's construction, to 1925 when the house was moved to an adjacent lot. The house was moved seventy five feet to the adjoining lot to the south in 1925 by the F. W. Welborn family from the location of its original construction, and its interior and exterior have been minimally altered during its period of significance. The one exception is the corner porch enclosure with its horizontal tripartite ban window that occurred in 1953, as evidenced in a later 1950s photograph of the house. While the alteration of a portion of the front porch with a weatherboard-sided enclosure changed the appearance of the house to some degree, the enclosure did not affect negatively the overall integrity of the house. The enclosure is simply detailed and is architecturally compatible with the house's original fabric and form.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The F. W. Welborn House, at 405 Weston Street in Fountain Inn, Greenville County, South Carolina, built ca. 1914, is eligible for inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C under the Area of Significance of Architecture as an excellent example of a Craftsman-influenced house in Fountain Inn featuring a distinctive eyebrow curve in the façade's front eave, exposed rafters under wide overhanging eaves, a large central tripartite window overlooking a grassy front yard, a deep corner porch at the house's southeast corner, exposed oak mantels, an eighteen foot window seat with recessed panels under the tripartite window, decorative leaded glass window transoms, oak window and door surrounds with bull's eye corner blocks, picture and crown molding, and flooring. The F. W. Welborn House is one of Fountain Inn's earliest homes and is one of the most representative and exemplary residential examples of the Craftsman style in Fountain Inn, relatively unaltered and comparable only to the McDowell House at 500 North Main Street. The F. W. Welborn House reflects Fountain Inn's growth and development during the early twentieth century from a small rural farming community of large two-story Queen Anne and vernacular houses to a textile-centered town with a central business district that boasted a new class of educated professionals including individuals such as Clemson graduate F. W. Welborn. Welborn built his house in Fountain Inn's principal residential neighborhood, one block east of Main Street and parallel to the central business district, in the most academic architectural style in Fountain Inn from the 1910s to the 1930s.

Architecture

Fountain Inn received its name from an Inn and fountain that was located on an Old Stage Coach Road between Greenville and Laurens, South Carolina.¹ A post office was established in Fountain Inn in 1832, and the town was a stagecoach stop before the Civil War. The town received its charter in 1884 after the establishment of a railroad depot along the Greenville and Laurens Line. After James I. West purchased half the Cannon family's property, he and James Cannon divided the land near the depot and laid off sixty-five lots that would become the town of Fountain Inn.² Largely a textile community during the late nineteenth and early twentieth century, Fountain Inn did not realize its economic and commercial potential until it installed its first telephones in 1904, and John T. Woodside purchased the former Fountain Inn Manufacturing Company in 1906.

By 1911, Fountain Inn's commercial and residential neighborhoods were clearly defined, and over the next decade the presence of a more academically-trained class of professionals began to operate their business in the commercial district and build houses in the adjoining neighborhoods that reflected the prevailing Craftsman style of the Arts and Crafts movement. The earliest houses on Weston Street were built in the Queen Anne style of the 1890s with a collection of agricultural outbuildings. The F. W. Welborn House, built ca. 1914, on Weston Street in Fountain Inn was the earliest Craftsman-influenced house built on Weston Street, and retains the highest level of integrity of all the houses built in this style in Fountain Inn. The other houses built with the stylistic elements of the Arts and Crafts movement in Fountain Inn have not retained the houses' integrity with the addition of artificial siding and windows, or owners have allowed the condition of the houses to deteriorate beyond the level maintained by the owners of the F. W. Welborn House.

The F. W. Welborn House is eligible for inclusion in the National Register of Historic Places under Criterion C as a significant local example of residential architecture growing out of the Arts and Crafts Movement of the late nineteenth century. The house was built by F. W. Welborn on Weston Street in Fountain Inn and has interior and exterior architectural details that are characteristic of the Craftsman style. Welborn built the one-story house with a low-pitched roof with deep, recessed porches at the northeast and southeast corners joined by a shallow porch walk across the façade in front of an expansive tripartite window that provided advanced natural light, a view of the large grassy front lawn to connect the owners and visitors with the natural outdoor environment, and simulate an “outdoor living room.” The house’s interior details exhibit exposed, natural details such as flooring, window and door surrounds, mantels, and molding. The interior raised paneled pocket doors between the living room and dining room qualify for the Craftsman’s ideals of making the two “practically one, so that you may see the cheery fire crackling in the hearth while you are at meals.”³

Additionally, the house exhibits Craftsman Bungalow ideals by having a short hallway that joins the original bedrooms to the bathroom, “dark-stained oak or pine woodwork, picture moldings...to create a sense of internal consistency,” and provisions for built-in amenities such as window seats and buffets to prevent the owner from purchasing unnecessary furniture.⁴ The house’s floor plan combines a generous front porch that opens to interior elements indicative of the Craftsman bungalow with a large living room containing a central fireplace that opens to the dining room, a compact kitchen, and short hallway leading to small bedrooms and bathrooms.

Developmental history/additional historic context information (if appropriate)

Historical Background

The F. W. Welborn House was built on a one-acre lot that was originally part of a five acre lot purchased by Mrs. Lula E. McKnight from W.B. Childress on December 30, 1896.⁵ This lot extended from Main Street to what is today Weston Street. McKnight sold the property to W.C. Babb on May 24, 1909, while reserving forty feet for “Western Street where said Street is now situated through said land.”⁶ William Clinton Babb was born on October 4, 1867 in Laurens County, South Carolina. He lived on Rabun Creek before moving to Fountain Inn in 1910 after purchasing land near downtown.⁷ Babb sold to Frank W. Welborn on October 3, 1914 three-fourths of an acre out of Babb’s five acre tract on what was Western Street (now Weston Street).⁸ Welborn was born the son of D.F. and Mary Jane Gilliland Welborn on December 8, 1885 in Laurens County, South Carolina. During his formative years, he worked as a laborer on his family’s farm before attending Clemson College.⁹ He secured a position as a cashier at the People’s Bank of Fountain Inn by 1920.¹⁰ By 1930 he served as the District Secretary and Treasurer of the Federal Loan Association. In 1932 he was appointed postmaster for Fountain Inn, serving until 1936¹¹. He retired in 1961 as the office manager of C.G. Gunter Company in Greenville, South Carolina. He was a member of the Men’s Bible Class and Brotherhood of the First Baptist Church of Fountain Inn, and the Woodmen of the World. His wife was Maisy Debard Welborn (May 16, 1885 – April 4, 1984). F. W. Welborn died on August 7, 1963, and is buried at Cannon Memorial Park in Fountain Inn.¹²

An early photograph shows the house shortly after it was built and before it was moved from its original location to an adjoining lot south of the house. The photograph shows the corner porches joined by a porch walk supported by four square columns with weatherboard-covered knee wall balustrades between the porch posts. Another photograph from the 1920s, after the house was moved and with shrubbery around the house and front yard, shows the house essentially as it had been in the ca. 1919 photograph. An additional photograph from the mid-twentieth century reveals the corner porch enclosure with its tripartite horizontal ban window, the center section of the knee-wall balustrade replaced with a turned balustrade, and the remaining main section of the front porch with insect screening. The Welborn family moved the house seventy-five feet to the east in 1925, and Welborn sold the property to his wife, Mrs. M.M. (Maisy) Welborn, on October 16, 1926. On November 23, 1926, Mrs. M.M. Welborn sold the property "known as the home place of the said F.W. Welborn, and having located thereon two residences."¹³ The Welborns owned the property for another nine years before selling it to Dr. R.L. Cashwell, a local physician in Fountain Inn, for $2,000.¹⁴ Dr. Cashwell sold the property to John Cornelius Walton and Minnie Lee McDowell Walton on May 30, 1941. J.C. and Minnie Walton lived in Gray Court and Greenwood, South Carolina, and Marshall and Hendersonville, North Carolina before moving to Fountain Inn in 1936 for J.C. to open the Fountain Inn Drug Company on Main Street in downtown.

After J.C. Walton's death in 1954, Minnie Lee Walton and her daughters sold the house and accompanying property after making various changes to the house's interior. One year before J.C. Walton's death, he enclosed the porch at the house's northwest corner for a kitchen. A few years after his death, Minnie Walton used the house's southern elevation as an apartment. This side of the house included a living room, bathroom, bedroom, and kitchen. Within a few years of the reorganization of the house for the apartment, Charles Alberson and his wife utilized this space as he was the new owner of J.C. Walton's Fountain Inn Drug Company. Minnie Walton sold the property to Edith A. Inman on April 24, 1981.¹⁵ Just over three years after the purchase, Edith Inman sold the house to Keith D. and Nikki R. Turner.¹⁶ On March 22, 1991, Nikki R. Turner sold her half interest in the property to Keith D. Turner.¹⁷ Keith Turner sold the property to the current owners, Rodney M. and Donna C. Brown, on August 31, 2005.¹⁸
