Description: This two story Victorian residence was built in the 1880s and is currently being restored as a private residence. The house is distinguished by ornamental double tiered porches which connect flanking bays. Central doorways on each floor are enframed by transoms and sidelights. Three single windows of six-over-six sash pierce the bays. Other architectural features include a plain entablature, pierced sawn porch balustrades, slender wood porch columns and pilasters, a beltcourse of wood extending the front facade and molded window caps. The house is set on a brick foundation. The hipped roof is covered with composition shingles.

Significance: Architecturally, this house is a singularly intact Victorian specimen of this style in the Central Midlands Region. It is a typical middle-class residence with spacious simple rooms, large window area, and scrollwork balustrades.
